

ABSTRACT

A system and method for synchronous configuration of DHCP server and router interfaces is disclosed. A network management layer identifies a DHCP server interface and a router interface associated with the same subnet. The network management layer then determines configuration information for the DHCP server interface and the router interface. The DHCP server and the router are programmatically configured with the determined configuration information.